

#individuals: 11. #ratings: 318. Mean confidence: 3.71

Confidences per question I am comfortable learning Python I am comfortable using the Python book I am comfortable using the UPPMAX documentation I can convert a simple equation to Python code I can convert a simple text question to Python code I can create a Python script I can describe what a program is I can describe what the Python interpreter is I can describe what the Python programming language is I can find and use a Python module on Rackham I can load a Python version on Rackham I can login to Rackham I can run a Python script I can start an interactive session on Rackham I can use a text editor on Rackham In Python, I can ask a user for input In Python, I can create a file In Python, I can create a variable In Python, I can find and use the operator for exponentiation In Python, I can import the 'matplotlib' library In Python, I can read a file In Python, I can use a for loop In Python, I can use a variable In Python, I can use command-line arguments In Python, I can use user input in a calculation In Python, I can write a function that calls a function In Python, I can write a function that requires an argument In Python, I can write a function with a return value In Python, I can write a function without an argument and without a return type In Python, I know what the modulo operator is and when to use it

0

5

answer